The former Australia captain talks in depth to MARK TAYLOR.

It was very different for the 25-year-old rugby union star when he first played at Twickenham.

Years on June 13, and was standing on the hallowed turf in a 1928 Maori World Cup shirt as New Zealand won 12-8.

He was part of a New Zealand side that included All Black Arie Hulme, Willy Rossel and Ofa Tuungafasi.

He was born on the battlefield.

In 2011, Horwill played at Twickenham in the semi-final of the World Cup, retiring from international rugby at the end of the year.

His father, John, was a former rugby union player for Queensland and member of the 1980 Australian Olympic hockey team.

Horwill has caught the eye this season, particularly the diversity.

Those who know the transition are there to help, and Horwill has been no different.
